This meeting is the third in a series of conferences on questions of the circulation of knowledge in Korea and beyond. The aim of these conferences, as well as of the cooperation with FU Berlin of which they are part, is to look at the exchanges and ensuing transformations of items of knowledge (especially when these exchanges take place across perceived “cultural” or “national” borders), as well as at cultural and epistemic changes that may result from these processes. The present conference focuses on the secondary transformations of knowledge that accompany or ensue after the initial transferral, i.e. cognitive and communicative processes through which new knowledge and its carriers are related to or integrated into existing (canons of) knowledge. The tools and mechanisms of dealing with new knowledge may include interpretive adaptation, dissection, selection and re-assemble, reduction and amplification, as well as blending with existing cognitive structures.

Thematicallly, the conference deals with a wide range of fields of knowledge, ranging from the literary and religious to the technical and scientific domain. Contributions are united methodologically, however, by keeping an eye not only on the message but also the medium: the nature of the carrier of knowledge (its genre or its material form) may well predispose the ways in which knowledge is re-configured and exerts formative powers on its new context. Therefore, presentations dealing with the textual tradition in a wide variety of genres are complemented by papers approaching the issue from the perspective of material objects (ritual utensils, mechanical tools, weapons, etc.) as both objects and carriers of knowledge.

Integration Processes in the Circulation of Knowledge: Cases from Korea and Beyond

06 - 08 June 2013

"The Circulation of Knowledge and the Dynamics of Transformation"

Freie Universität Berlin/Ruhr Universität Bochum Consortium

The design of the RUB Internationales Begegnungszentrum (IBZ International Meeting Place) represents a successful attempt of putting a several hundred year old farm building to a new use. Secluded but still close to the university’s concrete buildings visitors are invited to come together with their hosts in an idyllic atmosphere. The preservation of the old structures and the harmonic integration of new elements characterize the place which is located right next to the botanical garden.

RUHR UNIVERSITY BECKMANNSHOF

STRÄTLINGSHOF

Being one of the oldest buildings in Bochum, the history of todays Strätlingshof reaches back to 1831, when it was rebuilt after a devastating fire in the manner of a so called Low Saxon house. While it has been under preservation order, the building was restored in 1991 and put to new use as a restaurant and event center in 1996.
